

THE BARS OF LYNN

A Field Study

by

James Francis Murnane II, Professor Sclerosis
Mastoid Institute of Technology

&

Grant Arthur Albert, Doctorae un Urinal
University of Canned Light Alcohol

THE BARS IN ORDER

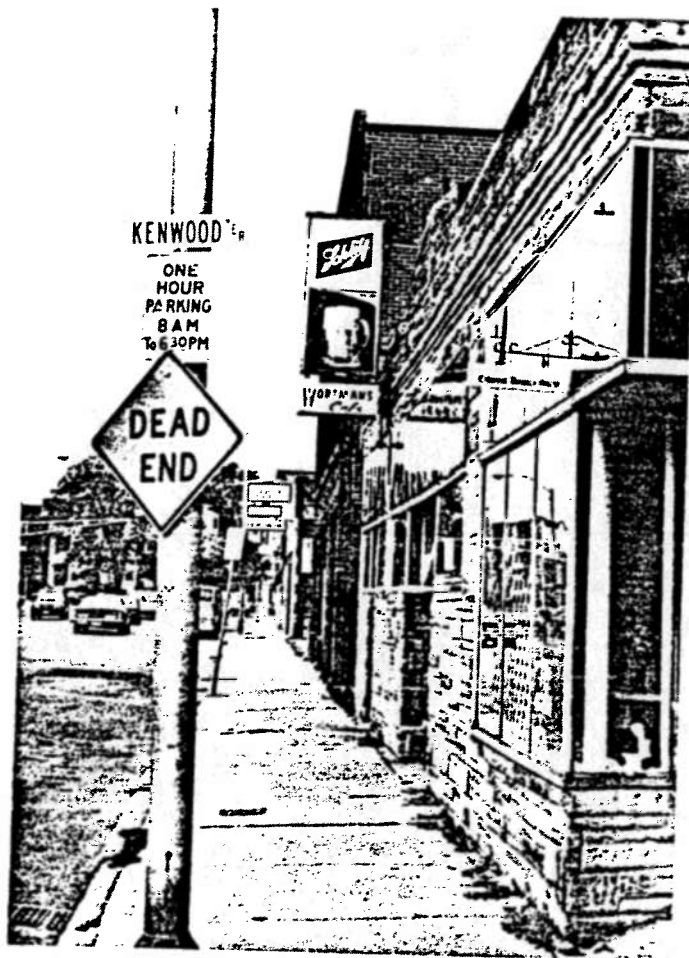

1	8.2.86	WORTMANN'S
2	8.2.86	BOHILL'S IRISH PUB
3	8.7.86	MISTER MAX'S PUB
4	8.7.86	39 BUFFUM STREET
5	8.12.86	THE COACHMAN LOUNGE
6	8.12.86	THE BLUE NOTE
7	8.12.86	SMUGGLERS COVE
8	8.12.86	THE CRYSTAL GRILL
9	8.14.86	MAX'S PUB
10	8.14.86	CORCORAN'S
11	8.14.86	CRONIN'S CAFE
12	8.14.86	THE BULL PEN
13	8.17.86	THE SIDE STREET
14	8.17.86	TONY'S CAFE
15	8.17.86	CONTI'S CAFE
16	8.17.86	MEL'S STATEROOM
17	8.19.86	THE BRANDY BARREL
18	8.19.86	THE SCOTCH MIST
19	8.19.86	THE CORINTHIAN CLUB
20	8.19.86	THE KLUB KAR
21	8.23.86	CROWLEY'S
22	8.23.86	THE SHAWMUT GRILL
23	8.23.86	PLAYER'S
24	8.23.86	BUCHANAN'S
25	8.23.86	THE GOLDEN CIRCLE
26	8.25.86	ZIGGY'S
27	8.25.86	THE ARENA
28	8.25.86	THE HALL OF FAME
29	8.25.86	BURKE'S 757 LOUNGE
30	8.25.86	RUTHIES PLACE
31	8.25.86	TONY'S
32	9.8.86	HOGAN'S II
33	9.8.86	THE 595 CAFE
34	9.8.86	THE BUS STOP
35	9.8.86	THE JIB
36	9.10.86	MCDONOUGH'S PUB
37	9.10.86	ROADHOUSE
38	9.10.86	MARKET SQUARE PUB
39	9.10.86	THE FOUR WINDS
40	9.12.86	UNION STATION

A FOOTNOTE: The lapse between 8.25.86 and 9.8.86 was due to an all-star break (vacation) and does not reflect a lack of professionalism on anyone's part.

#1

WORTMANN'S

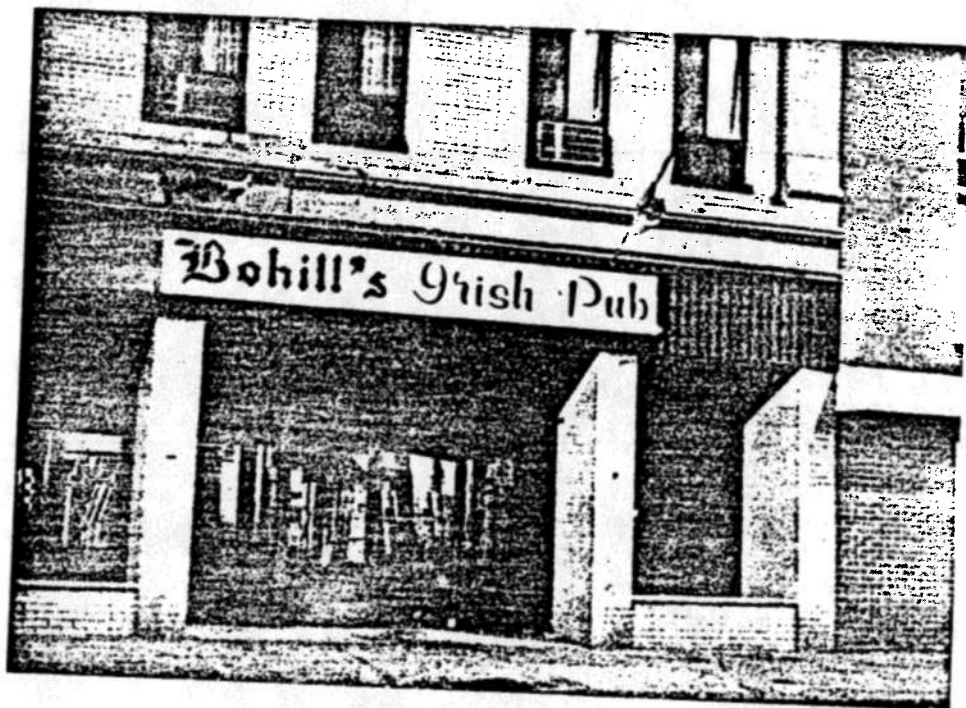

What can we say about #1? Good bad or stale ale it's still number one. Kind of a dusty varnished atmosphere that reminds one of his uncles redecorated basement (this turns out to be a reoccurring theme in Lynn) done around 1965. What can you say, when watching (on the COLOR TV) TV and the bartender asks you if it's "Grease" by way of a conversation starter, and it is in fact "Saturday Night Fever". What can you say? Somehow appropriate for our first stop on our biblical trek - nay Crusade-through Lynn. A "Special Place" and still number one in our book ar,ar.

BOHILL'S

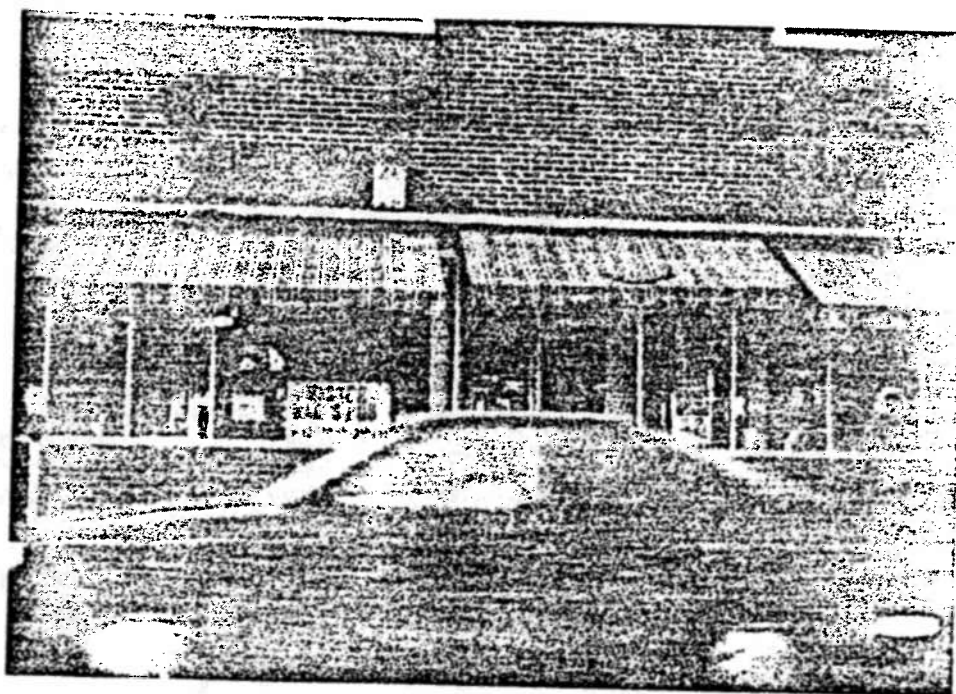

For those of you who like draft Guinness , authentic live Irish music and good food - this is the place in Lynn for you. Clean, nicely laid out bar with pleasant decor and of course, an all Irish staff. A good place to take the family, almost yuppie- but it's not crowded enough and the prices are too reasonable. Deserves the Gold Star even at this early stage.

You could bring mom here. It's a good show - never stuffy.

MR. MAX'S PUB

A dark squarish bar with an inactive, slurring clientele. In fact, one patron was found to be snoring next to his Miller. The frowning barmaid seemed to be used to this type of behavior. She seemed refreshed when she was able to talk with people that could speak (not just string together vowels and syllables composed mostly of sour mash). Even the juke box seemed tired and slurring. It was comforting to leave the men's room. We were told "You can find a seat on a Friday or Saturday night", hard to imagine anyone could stay away at all.

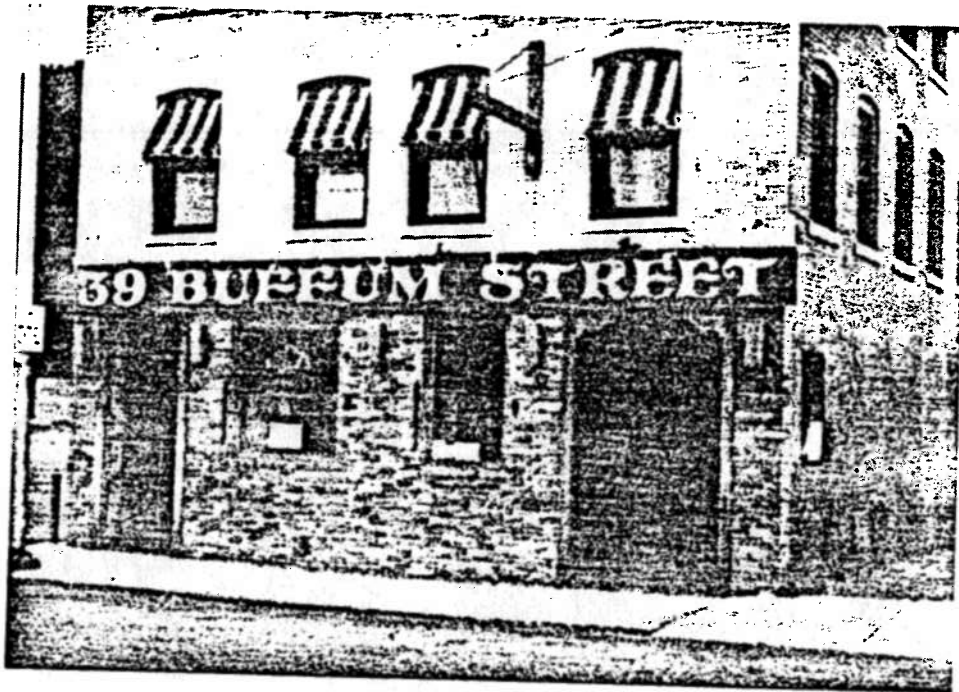

39 BUFFUM STREET

Now that's practicality for you: Why not name your bar by its address - that way you can always find it!!

OK, OK, this place has a reputation, well earned I'm sure. But it's a lively place and if you like darts and a lot of AC DC with Angus Young on the VIDEO JUKEBOX - this is your place.

It may even be the place for lunch - they've got specials. The softball team was present when we hit the 39 - but they welcomed us and even played darts with us - one guy let us borrow his darts for a good 2 hours - what a pal. Sometimes reputations are earned, sometimes it's just rotten luck. My vote is for the latter when talking about the 39.

THE COACHMAN LOUNGE

What a stroke of luck - we hit the night that the French barmaid was working. She was trying to teach French to a gentleman that had lost the command of the English language - very amusing.

Grant had a "bad" Coors on tap, I had a Miller on tap. This was a turning point in our journey - we decided to stay away from draft beer and the use of glasses in general. Bottle beer was much safer, alas.

Ron Reagan was on the Tube. The crowd was thin - but on a Saturday night I bet the place gets packed - pool tables in the backroom draw big ones.

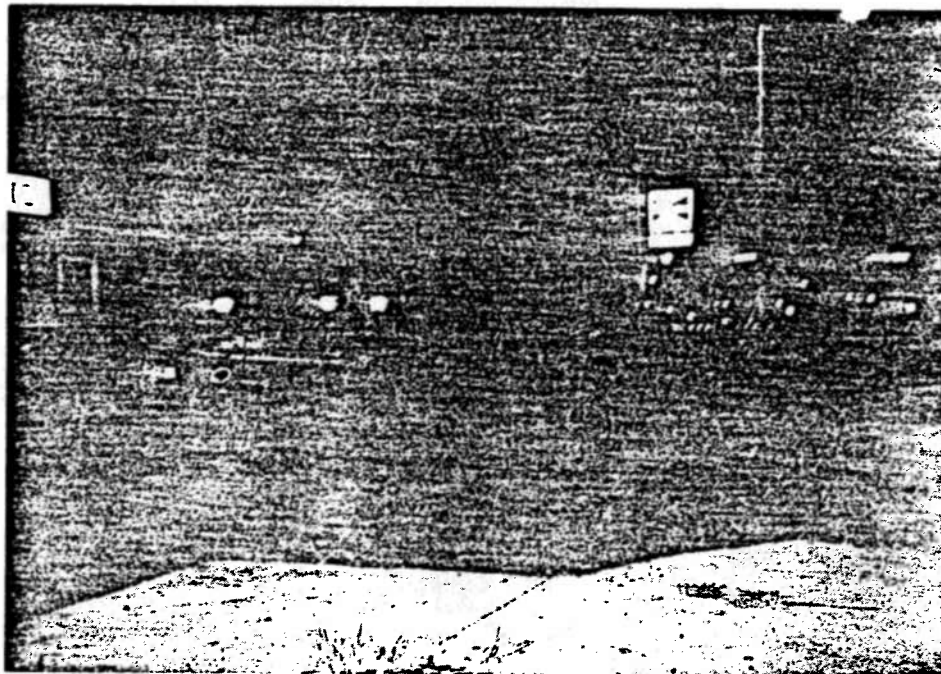

THE BLUE NOTE

A very nice, open, barnlike atmosphere with plenty of dart boards. A large capacity establishment with Olive Oyl on the Ladies Room, Popeye on the Men's. Bumper Pool you fancy? - Here's the place and a large screen T.V. to boot.

A real happening place, complete with food. And we had the fortune of observing a possibly underaged young lady stagger over to greet Olive Oyl, push through the door, do the obvious, then stumble back our only to be escorted from the bar.

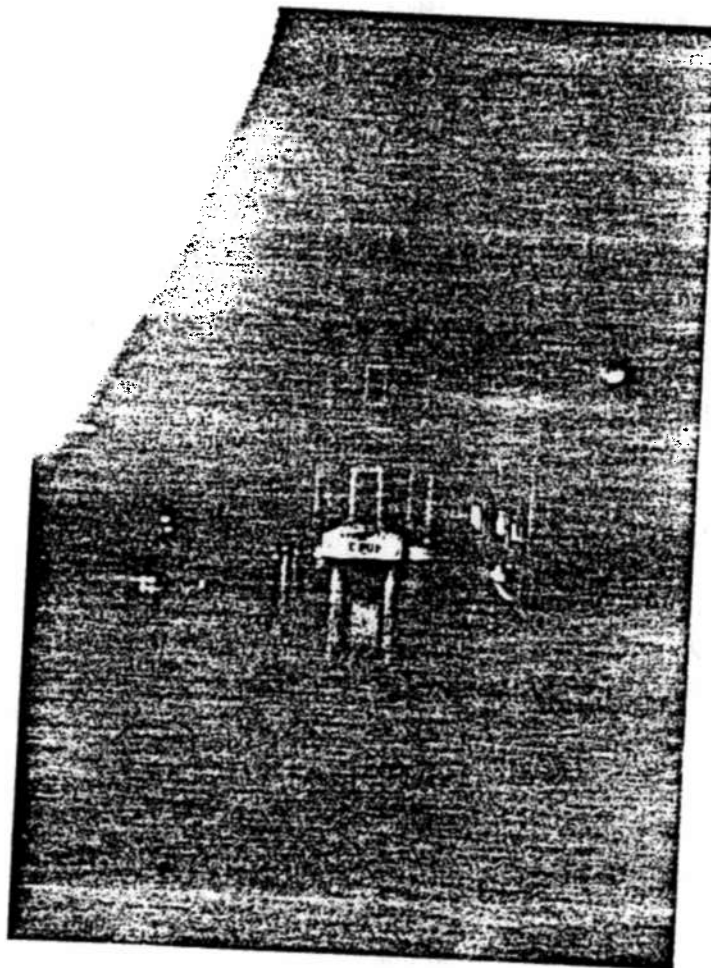

A real OK place.

SMUGGLER'S COVE

A nice angular place with good music to greet you (CCR, Doors, George). Kinda a family atmosphere, almost sophisticated (for Lynn). Comando was on the screen, a place with HBO, WOW what a class "A" joint - these guys don't fool around.

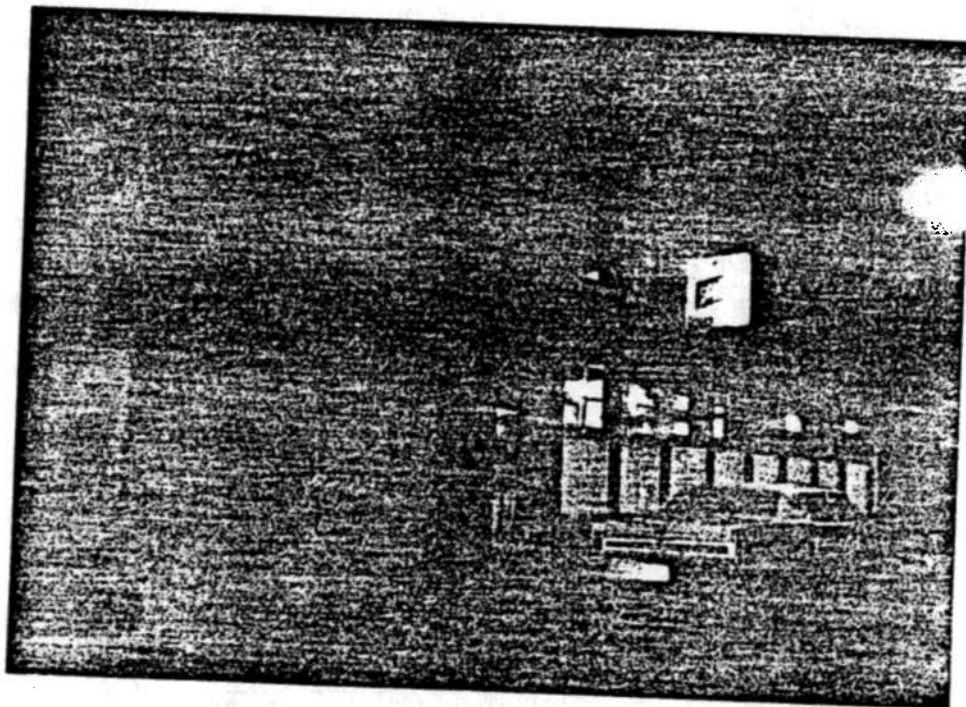

The men's room is small and overworked. The bar was very crowded, no room at the bar - but we found room at the tables. Sorta hated to leave - but when you've got a job to do.....

THE CRYSTAL GRILL

If aquamarine bomber-rang formica is your scene, this place is for you. The Crystal is a long, narrow bar with an exit at either end - not that you'll want to leave - what, with Ernie serving up the brews, the color TV, the 10 pm beer belly measurements (Ernie thought he had a 42" but it topped out at an impressive 45") the dusty, yellowed Clydesdale's mode, and bright, fluorescent lighting, there's atmosphere o' plenty here. So curl up with your beer, it's plenty cold, and let Ernie tell you the bits of wisdom he's gathered - Quote "I'm not a fast bartender, I'm not a slow bartender, I'm a halfast bartender". Oddly, there's no Bud here. Only Miller, Coors & Miller Lite. My bar stool had been ripped out of the floor with only 4 bolt studs left in the floor. There was an older feel to the crowd. I'm not sure, but I think they miss us.

A must see.

MAX'S PUB

A tight bar, with a warm, but professional air. The kitchen is easily viewed from a bar stool - the food looks good.

We were impressed by the frosted mugs and the reasonable prices of draft beer available. This was a classy place - they had their own matches!

The draft Moosehead was cool and crisp - duly impressed. You can't go wrong here.

CORCORANS

We walked in. The woman across the bar gave us a look you could have poured on a waffle. She looked like she liked waffles. We'd no more than sat down to wet our whistles than the black guy next to me wanted to sell me some blow. This is a good place to go drink without the needless distractions of good food, decor and company. One of the patrons, who we had met at Mr. Max's, had definitely gone into english optional and wanted to talk to someone about something that had happened to him sometime ago at someplace or the other and didn't this mean something to someone?

Jim was glad we finished our beer, before he tried to strike up a conversation with either of us. A dark, tudor interior along with green lights on the bottles arranged in the middle of the island style bar, creates an atmosphere reminiscent of nausea.

CRONIN'S CAFE

A very special place, perhaps not the place, but the people. The atmosphere was very calming, no anxiety here. Deja Vu: We have here the identical Clydesdale model as we found in the Crystal!

But the real story here is not the structure - for the bar was simply four walls - what made it special was Skippy!

We first saw Skippy as he proudly waddled into Cronin's with a stolen case of Very Fine Grapefruit Juice. He promptly plopped the case on the bar and stated "I,I,I, could gotten two #@*!% cases of 'em - do you want one?"

The astute barmaid replied, "Don't you bring that stolen merchandise in here Skippy.. All I need is the cops".

So obediently, Skip hoisted the hot grapefruit juice on his shoulder and plodded toward the door. As he did so, his shorts lost their fight against gravity. To which the Barmaid offered "Pull you Bermudah's up, Skippy, or you're gonna get arrested for indecent exposah!"

But that wasn't all. As we were walking down the street, exiting Cronin's, we happened to meet Skippy hurriedly escorting a case of Diet Pepsi (tonic as he referred to it) on his shoulder down the sidewalk.

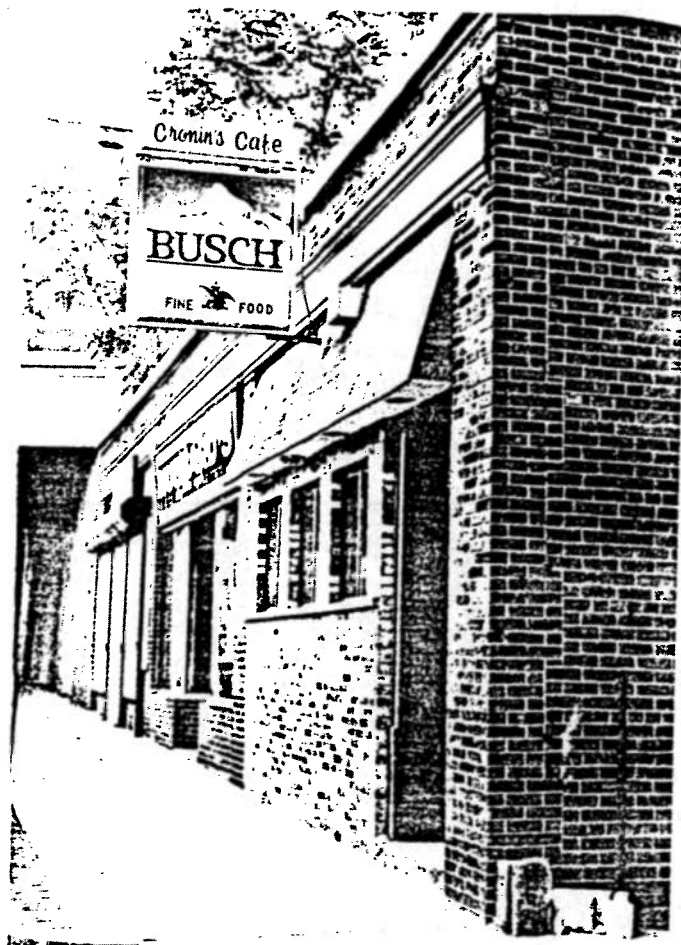

As we approached, Grant startled Skippy by saying, "Ah Skip, not another case".

Just then, Skippy lost it all: The cardboard case folded in half which sent Pepsi Cans careening to the ground and rolling down the street.

Skippy, obviously frantic, but intent on reassembly his case, blurted out "You.... you guys made me do that!"

We laughed and walked on, reminiscing on Cronin's barmaid's words of wisdom, when Skippy left with his case of Grapefruit Juice:

"They let 'em out on weekend passes....but they keep the wrong ones locked up!"

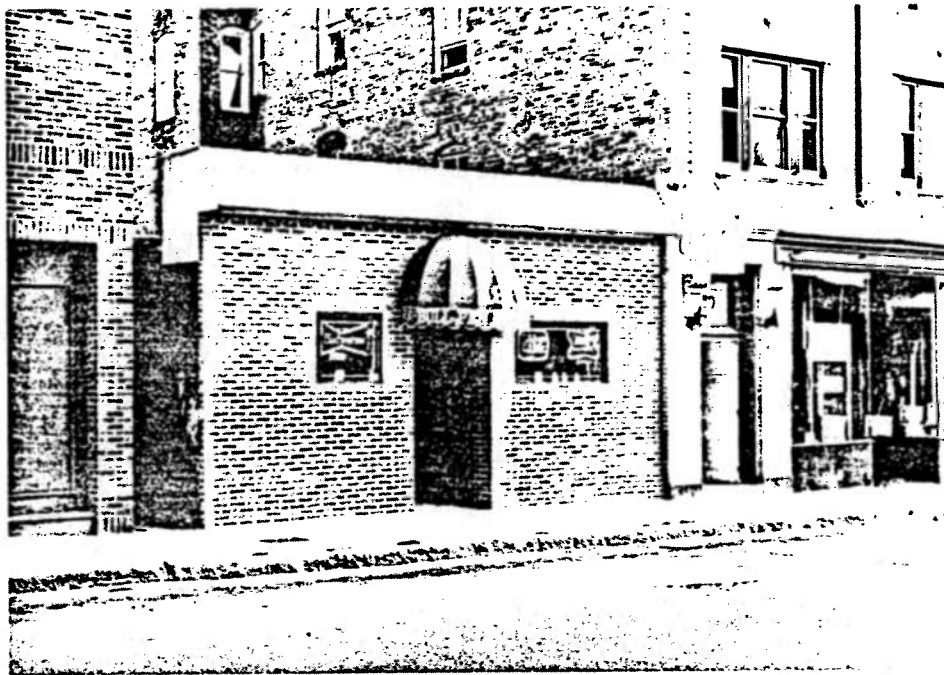

BULL PEN RESTAURANT

The Bull Pen is an airy, open bar with a light-hearted atmosphere.

We noted the two wild boars mounted on the wall behind the bar and were promptly briefed on the dental characteristics and the killing habits of boars by the two barmaids. They seemed quite knowledgeable.

The Bull Pen had their own Softball and Dart Team with a couple nice dart boards.

A neat bar with a friendly staff made the Bull Pen a nice round-off to the evening.

SIDE STREET

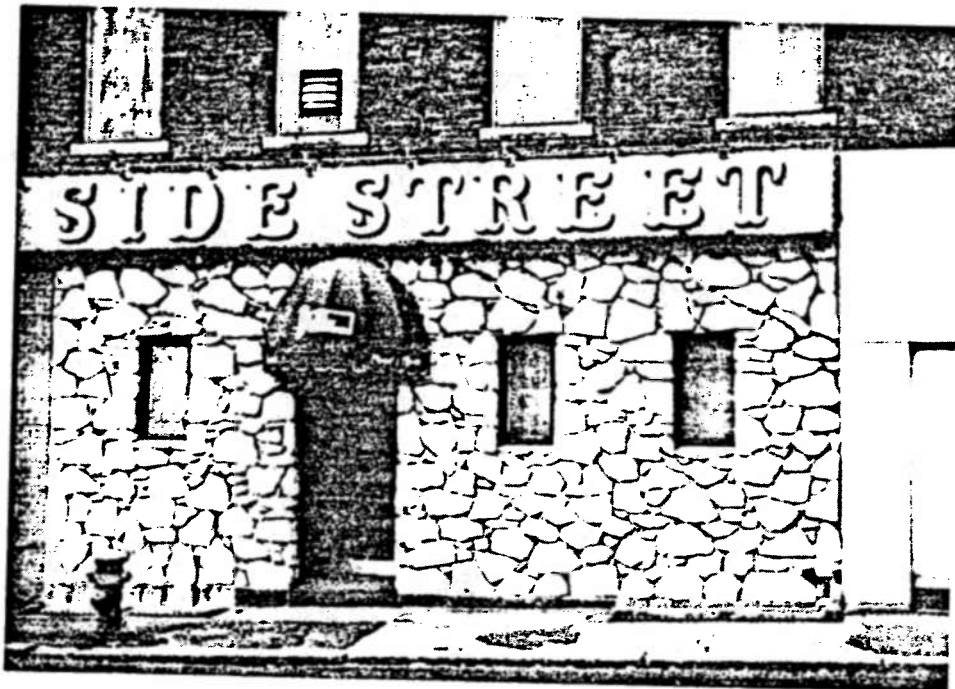

If you hit the Side Street on a Sunday, Dennis, who wears a nice vest and tuxedo trousers (black, formal black) will be your bartender.

John came in, while were were visiting, apparently a regular who knew Dennis well enough to give him a hard time.

There were New York Magazine covers framed on the walls (Rita Hayworth, Lt. James Stewart, etc.).

The bar we indulged at was oval and a Bandstand was central to the room and the place ooyed of polka.

Probably a great place for a wedding reception. No doubt a family party joint.

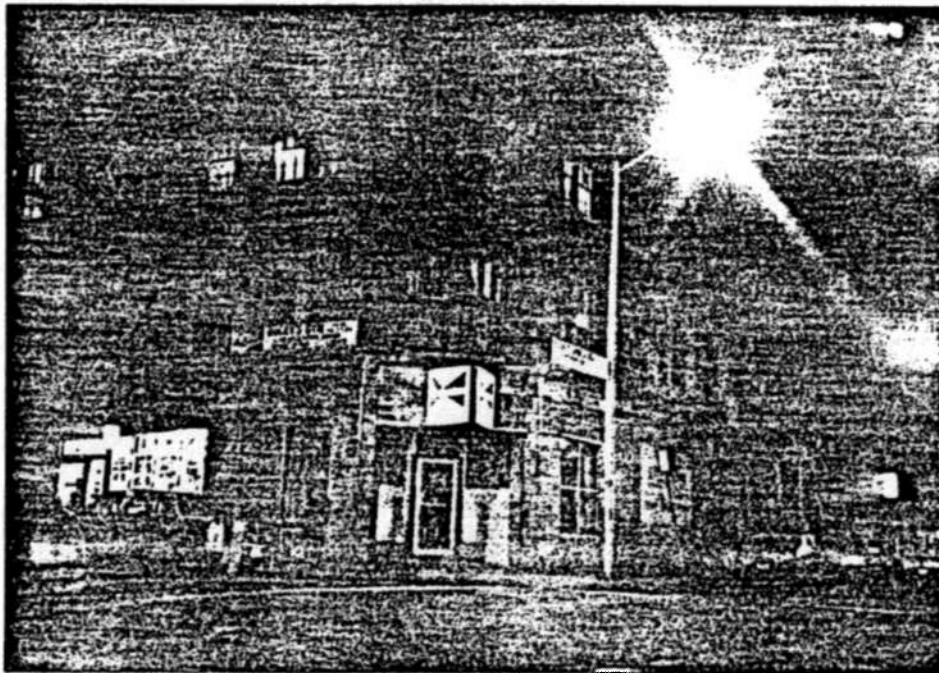

TONY'S CAFE

Come on in, this place is on the street below "Rocky's Gym". An older crowd graces this avid, older bar with painted tin ceilings (brown).

The ceilings were high and so was the elder clientele as one fine gentleman sauntered over to the juke box to make such awesome rock & roll selections as "Paper Roses" - Marie Osmond. Some slow dancing was present but sitting was king.

The men's room entrance was unique and quite challenging, it narrowed as you neared your destiny - no fat people made it into this restroom - I guess they opted for the women's room.

The classic, vintage Clydesdales were present. But let's not forget that Tony's offered fine cuisine: $1.00 sandwiches, your choice: Tuna or Egg Salad!

CONTI'S CAFE

Walter is your bartender for the evening at this quaint bar located in the heart of historic Lynn. It's sad but whenever urban renewal is mentioned, it's places like this they want to put on the business end of a wrecking ball.

There are booths here but these reviewers choose some open stools at the bar. And what a bar!! If cheap beer is your thing, then it's $1.10 Buds will wet your whistle. Looks like maybe Conti's had some plans for some remodelling of the back room, but this was closed off to the public by an Army blanket. Although who knows, maybe they're planning a grand opening gala! They also had a real old timer there who was nursing a brew at a booth between periodically shuffling over to air his whiskers at the fan near us. Someone finally showed him out the door. Oddly, they also have an announcement for a dart team but no dart board - so leave em' at home.

Looks like the team is going to have to do a little fund raising.

MEL'S STATEROOM

Here's where we finally got a chance to break out the 40/40 commemorative dart set. And what a place to play!! What with getting carded and a drunk guy we thought we left at Conti's who wanted to fight something, there was hardly time to catch our breath on this stop of our whirlwind tour.

But once the fighter and his trainer left through the back door, we broke out the darts and soaked up the suds. Most of the clientele seemed to be involved in T.V. We didn't ask the bartender who Mel was and whether diplomacy important in his work at the Stateroom.

A good place to end the evening after a brisk walk from Conti's.

THE BRANDY BARREL

The Barrel was on low key when we hit it - almost all the lights were off. There were just enough on for the barmaids to serve us two Buds.

The atmosphere seemed to be good - a potential was here but we couldn't quite get the outlook on the entire place.

The barmaids were friendly and the beer was cheap.

We were on a mission from God, so we moved on. Nothing special here.

THE SCOTCH MIST

Why do bar D.J.'s insist on playing painfully loud music when there is only four people in the place - We don't know.

But this D.J. was playing music - too loud, nothing worse than someone at the controls with poor taste in music and a volume control at his fingertips.

The barmaid here must have been trained in the Navy as a Semaphore Operator. Apparently, she thought we had had a few or had IQ's of less than 70. She was rude and our tip reflected our appreciation of her congeniality.

The beer was too expensive, the service was poor, and the atmosphere was offensive.

DON'T BOTHER.

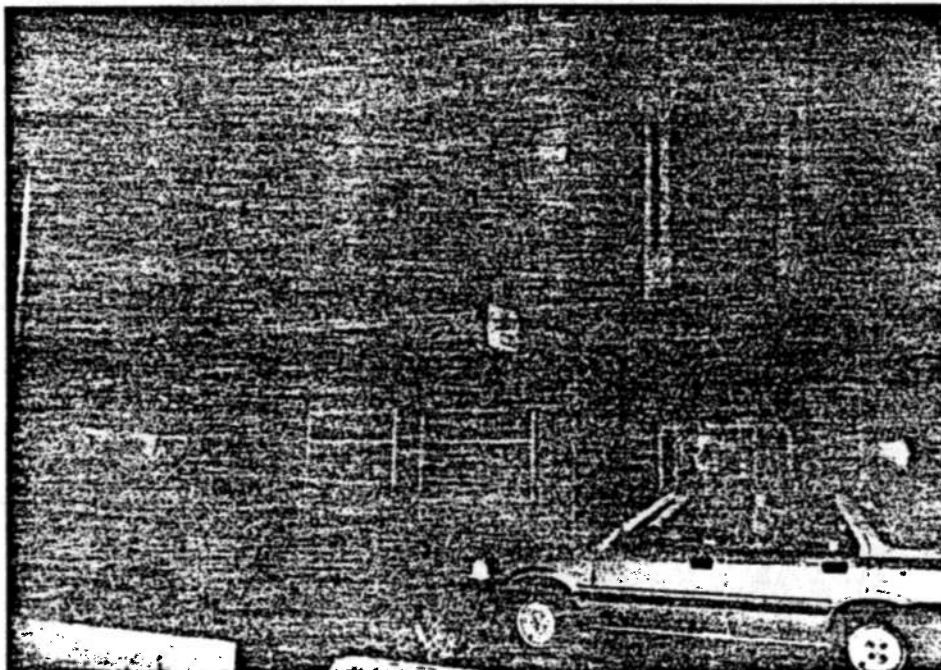

THE CORINTHIAN CLUB

Off the beaten path but you know what the saying is. When we first walked in the "Members & Guests Only" sign sort of worried us, but they seem to have an enlightened attitude about patrons. Bathroom is great with signs along the walls & in front of you - "Flush Like You Mean It", "Stand Close, Flush", "Flush, So I don't Smell", "Pretend You're At Home - Flush, Flush, Flush". Even I got the point. People must get very drunk here. While getting the beers, I met Jim Hughes who came to be our host for the evening. Jim sported a red moustache and a white Miller Lite hat and was obsessed with discussing the Commonwealth Status of the Eastern Seaboard States. When I introduced Jim and he found out they had the same name, he talked about how his dad's name was Jim but his mother called him Jamie, his son was called Jimmy and he had a grandson James. I guess they like the name. Jim was 47. He didn't remember how long he'd been a member but told us the bar used to light up "all different colors" and "was any of us good at wiring?...I'm a painter by trade so I know about colors but not wiring.....You guys ought to go to the Lithuanian Club behind the Bus Station...cause you can't go into all the bars in this town cause you're not the right color. ("What's the right color Jim?" we asked). "What's the right color? GREEN. You guys going? Well, bye Grant and Jim. Watch out for the blue people."

"Thought you said the green people?"
"Oh, them too, but blues are the worst."
"Uh, O.K., bye Jim."

So ended our visit to the Corinthian.

THE KLUB KAR

Dynamically located 'neath the railroad tracks in Lynn, this establishment is graced with a long, long bar, a cigarette machine named "Donna" (maybe she should meet B.B. King's guitar), and a top hat, gloves and cane on the men's room door. It had a happy atmosphere - evident from the abundant clown paraphernalia: clown paintings, clown puppets, clown plaques, just about every type of clown memorabilia one could think of. Also has live music on occasion.

There was a good crowd for a Tuesday. Always a safe getaway - the Klub Kar has three exits.

CROWLEY'S

Crowley's had a quiet but busy Saturday night atmosphere, no seating at the bar. We surmised that Crowley's was a good place to be on a Saturday night in Lynn because we recognized our bartender from Wortman's (kinda like seeing where the truckers' stop to find a good place to eat).

Oddly enough, there were two T.V.'s at opposite ends of the standard 30 foot, one sided bar with the Bears vs. the Cards on one set, Golden Girls on the other.

Obviously, the management was aiming at drawing a varied cross-section.

THE SHAWMUT GRILLE

Enter in the rear of this one-story stucco building, reminiscent of a bomb shelter; Welcome to the Shawmut. Its a hop back in time - thirty years or more - a real Rod Serling gem.

Although the decor - tables, bar stools, waitresses, etc., were all straight out of the 1950's, all were so well preserved, it was downright eerie.

The atmosphere was lighthearted and full of dance while the Shawmut Trio methodically rummaged through as many as three songs in a row between breaks. The band consisted of a jock on the magnus, "we can make any song sound corny" organ, a cat with brushes rapping on the skins, and an ace on sax.

The average age of the Shawmut's guests was over 60, nevertheless, dancing was king - a good place to trip the light fantastic. We spent time at one of the Shawmut's many formica tabletop booths, which incidentally had juke box selections at our fingertips. With choices like: "Hey Bartender" by Jerry Lee and "Under the Boardwalk" by (J.C.M.). The Shawmut was unanimously voted the best of the evening!!

PLAYER'S

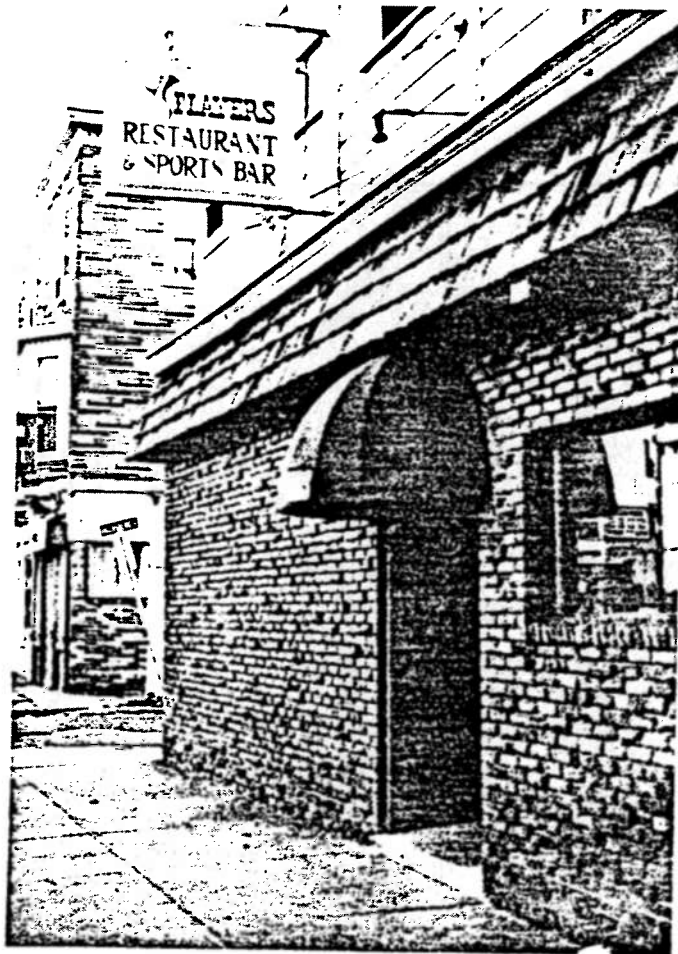

The two traveller's entered the bright pseudo sport's bar from the windy night to find two lucky seats right at the corner of the bar.

But as they nervously watched a heavily unbalanced ceiling fan overhead, they wondered about the fate of the last patrons that had sat on those stools.

One coupled danced (looked like a mother/son-in-law combo).

Player's seems to proclaim itself a sports bar but we found this proclamation questionable - there were two T.V.s in the place: one had a Phil Collins concert on, the other the News.

Nice clean bathrooms with portholes on the doors - nice touch.

BUCHANAN'S

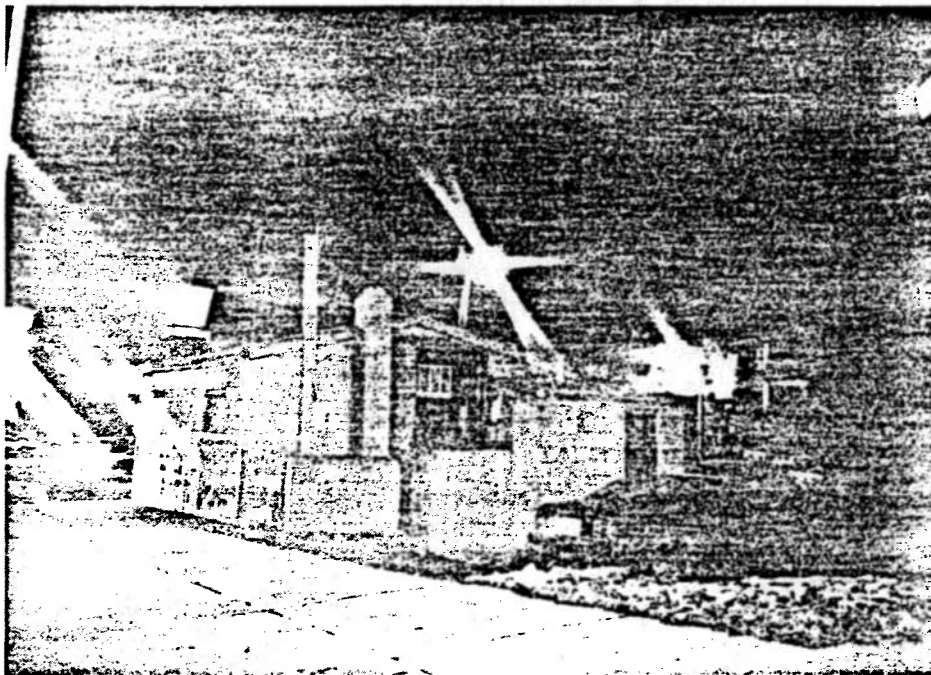

A landmark. Although this tiny bar is strategically located on the corner of Eastern and Western Avenue, on a Saturday night there was plenty of room for two strangers. The Buchanan atmosphere was warm and very friendly, the regulars took to us right away and treated us as cousins.

The bartender asked us if we had I.D.'s. We said "Yes" and he said O.K. and served us two Budweisers without seeing our licenses - what a trusting soul. What a pal.

When visiting the Buchanan, one must take note of the many historic pictures (patrons, golf teams, softball teams, bowling teams) on its walls - showing that this bar has truly stood the test of time.

The men's room is very interesting: it has no sink, no urinal, no mirror; it's just a room about the size of a small closet (you have to duck to enter) with a 6 foot ceiling - with a toilet (with no tank) and a button on the wall if you care to flush. Simple, functional, appropriate.

A good place to hoist em.

THE GOLDEN CIRCLE

Here's a fun place. Here is where we encountered our first incident with bar management (and lost) !

When we first came into the dark and sparsely populated bar-room, we had'n't noticed the dart board opposite to our seats.

We promptly, upon noticing the opportunity, asked the barmaid if we could play. Upon receiving a positive response, we proceeded to fumble and bumble around looking only to light up our playing target. And just as we discovered the "right switch", a gentleman and a lady approached us (obviously, the owners of the establishment). The conversation went like this:

THEM: "You can't play darts."

US : "Sure we can, just watch.....Why not?"

THEM: "Uh, we don't play darts here."

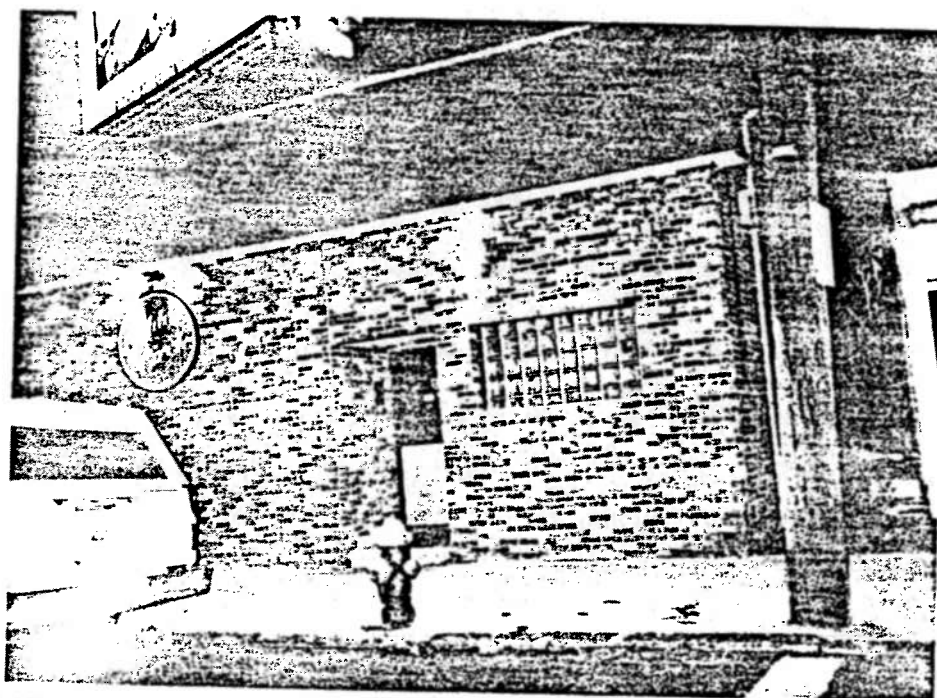

US : "Then why do you have a dart board?"

THEM: "Well, uh, uh, we don't play at night."

US : "Then why do you have lights on the board? Winter Games, I suppose."

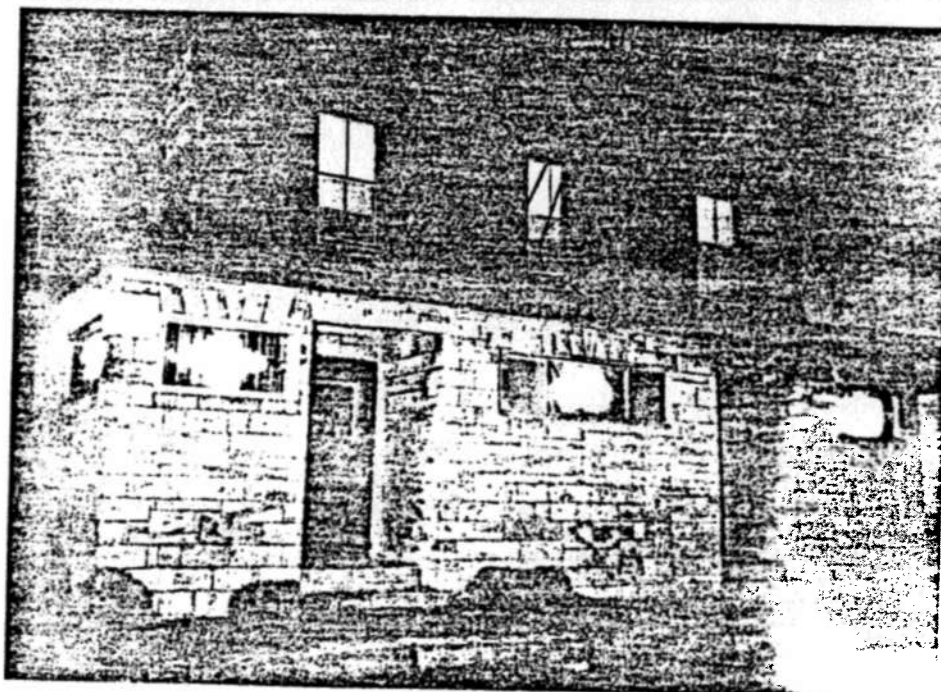

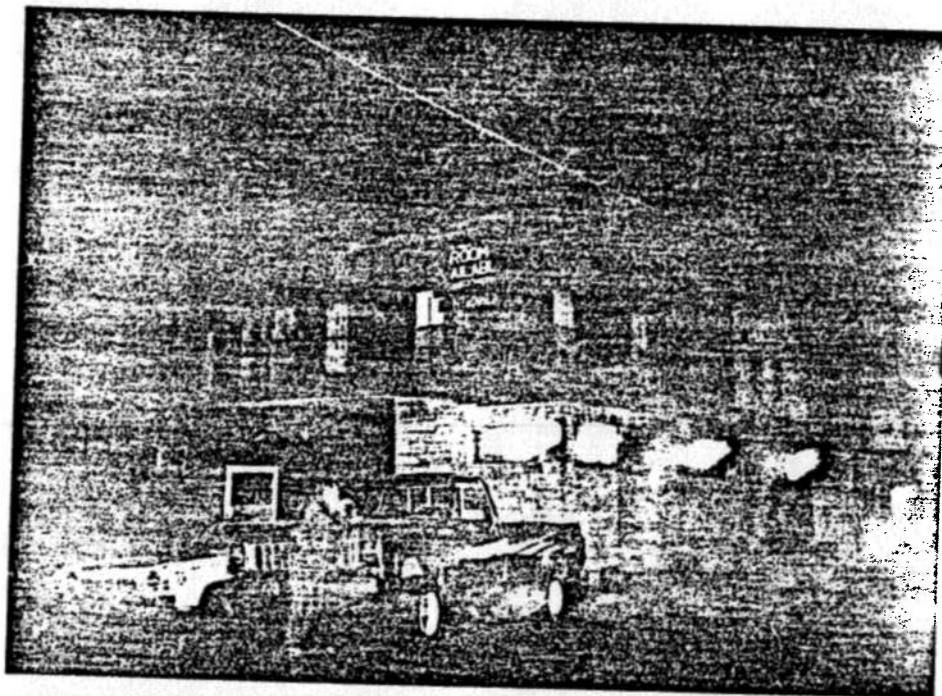

End of conversation.

Distraught, the two frustrated would-be dartsmen drained their beers and stormed out.

ZIGGY'S

No name outside so you gotta know where you're going and where you're going it's mounted fish and a lot of them. Ziggy must know a good taxidermist. In fact, he should introduce him to Mr. Cronin (Cronin's Cafe #11) who has a lot of snapshots up on the wall from his cronies (get it?) and a lot of dead unstuffed fish; it's hard to tell whose eyes are more glazed (the fish or the fisherman). This bar has darts and it's pretty low-key despite the bank vault front door. Bring a friend.

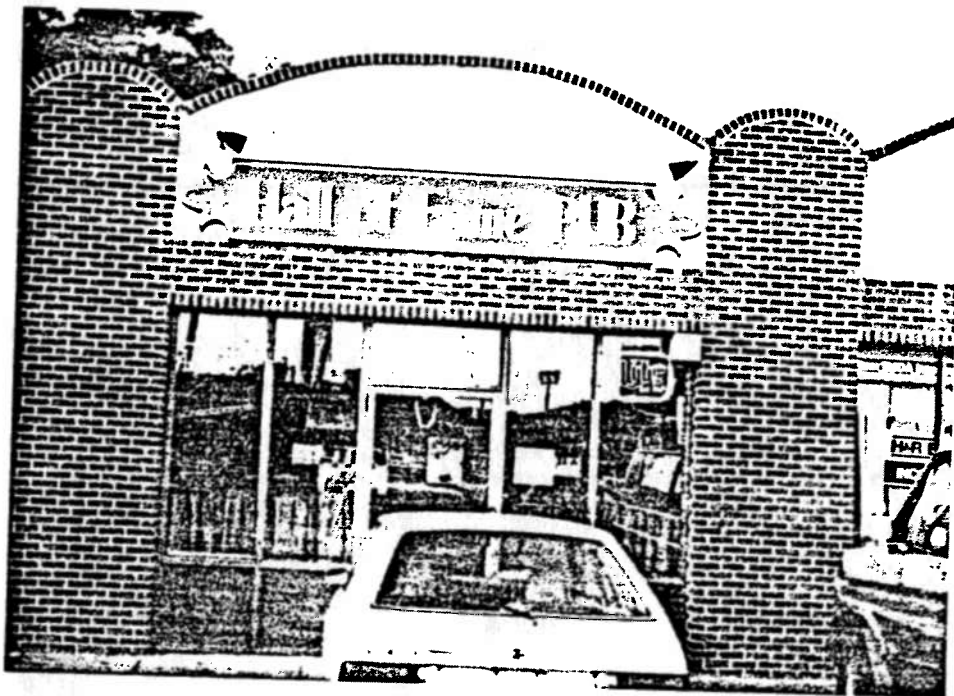

THE HALL OF FAME

(recently the Trolley Car)

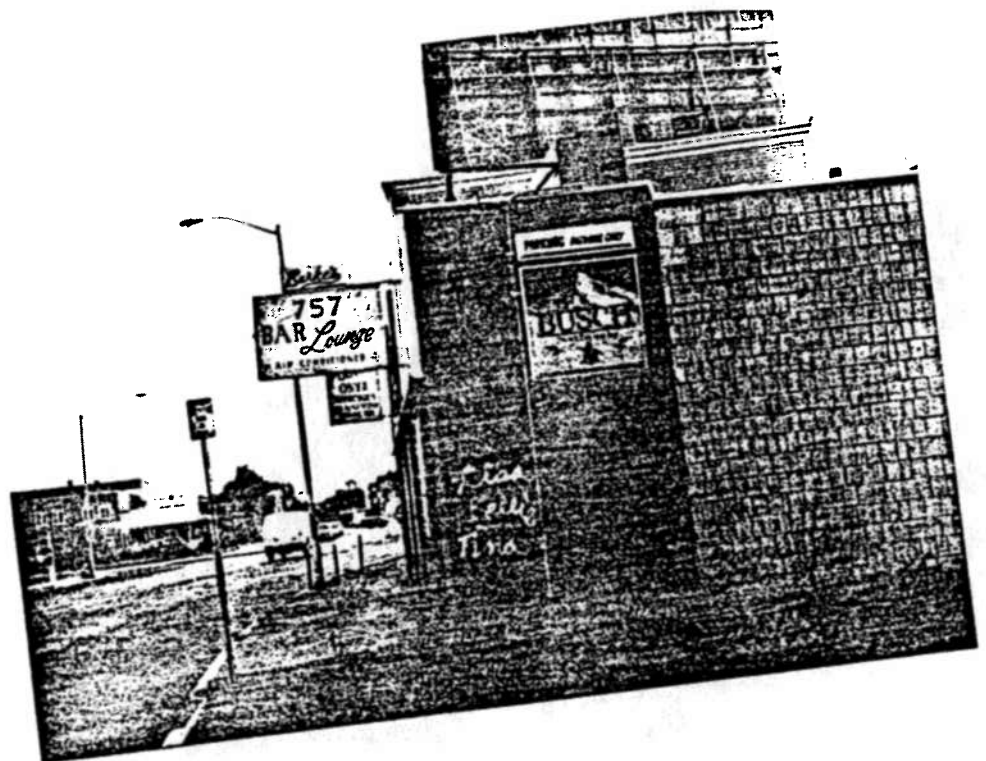

This is Lynn's only true sports bar. Maybe that says it all. We were carded here. The barmaid thought I didn't look my age. Then she said "Jim you look like Ron Howard with the moustache." Jim replied, "Anyone but him." "You'd like to have his money though!", she said. "He does", I lied. "Then how come you're buying the beers?", she replied.

We shut up and quit while we were behind. Plenty of TV's and posters of Boston sports heros. Cold beer. No darts.

BURKE'S 757 LOUNGE

Here's one on Western that seems like it's out of a western. No question this place is a shambles and with the bare bulb mood lighting it makes you feel like it's always closing time and they're getting ready to kick everyone out. Not that they'd have a lot of customers clamouring for last rounds nosiree...what customers were there seemed more in need of last rites. The bar is very old and ornate and has fallen on hard times. The bar mirror having been painted over about 20 years ago by an art student with a depressing landscape of death valley with signs stuck in it advertising Early Times. Probably a primitive kind of subliminal advertising .. desert...thirst...bar...etc. In the backroom there are darts, broken furniture and cleaning equipment which I guess they've lost the instructions for. One patron supposed that the bar was named after the size of the women here but these reviewers think it was probably an off night as they were in fact only barely recognizable as such. As an aside there are no toilets in the bathroom. So plan ahead.

RUTHIES PLACE

Walk right in, you may be lucky like we were to have Ruthie herself tending bar. She's a tallish, bleach blonde with a perky set of..... of..of hands (yeah, that's the ticket). Take a look around and notice the numerous horseshoes on the walls, beams, and inlaid in the floor—even as you exit—horseshoes in the sidewalk out front. Ruthie likes horses, we guess. Ruthies has an upstairs and downstairs (closed) and a dark, quiet, pleasant atmosphere. A typical color t.v. establishment with a standard rectangular island type bar...with above average wood finish. No darts.

TONY'S ("The Broken Home")

Two entrances, a Schlitz "Lantern" light out front and a horseshoe bar as well as seating at tables or at the bar invites you to have a few while you watch the Sox stomp Cleveland. But take care, it's a dimly lit joint with prehistoric pinball machines (unlit) lurking in the shadows that make it somewhat tough finding the men's room.

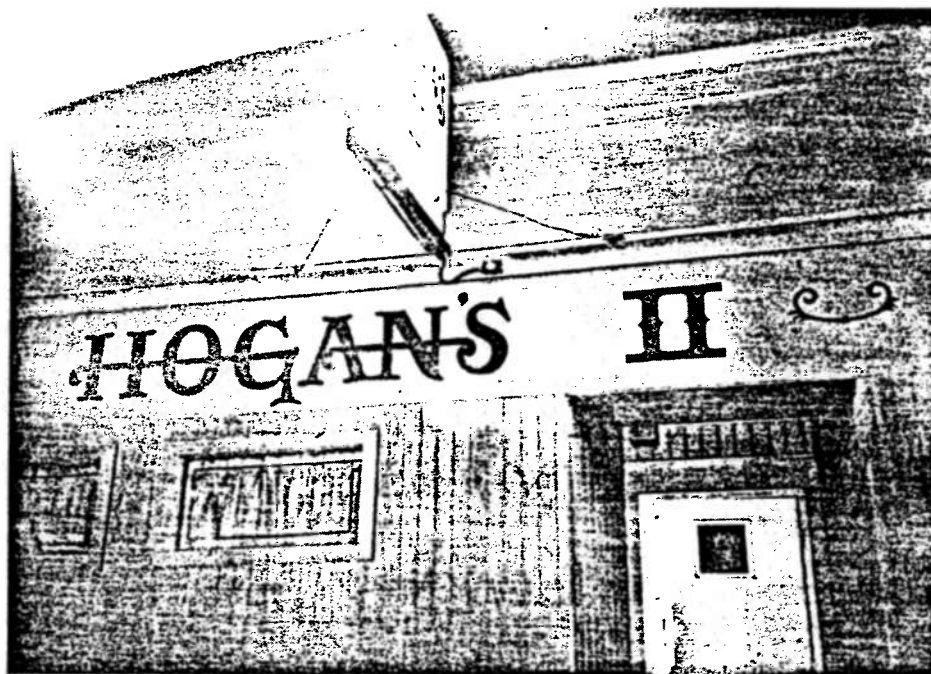

HOGAN'S II

A brightly lit bar, scenically located across from Bennie's Pizza, Hogan's II sported a young crowd. The bar (horseshoe-type) was well stocked and you couldn't find an open stool. Even most of the tables were occupied.

You'll never be bored here either, not with the Harlem Globetrotters pinball, pooltable and two cole T.V.'s, no sir.

A great place to come and watch "the ball game".

THE 595 CAFE

More mounted fish - tuna and sailfish - this time. There's no TV and the people at the bar speak Polish, so bring your dictionary. The bar is well lit and well managed. While these reviewers weren't interested in food, it looks like it might be a good place. The crowd here looks like it would also be at home in the Shawmut Grille so age might be a problem. Probably a good cheap date. No darts.

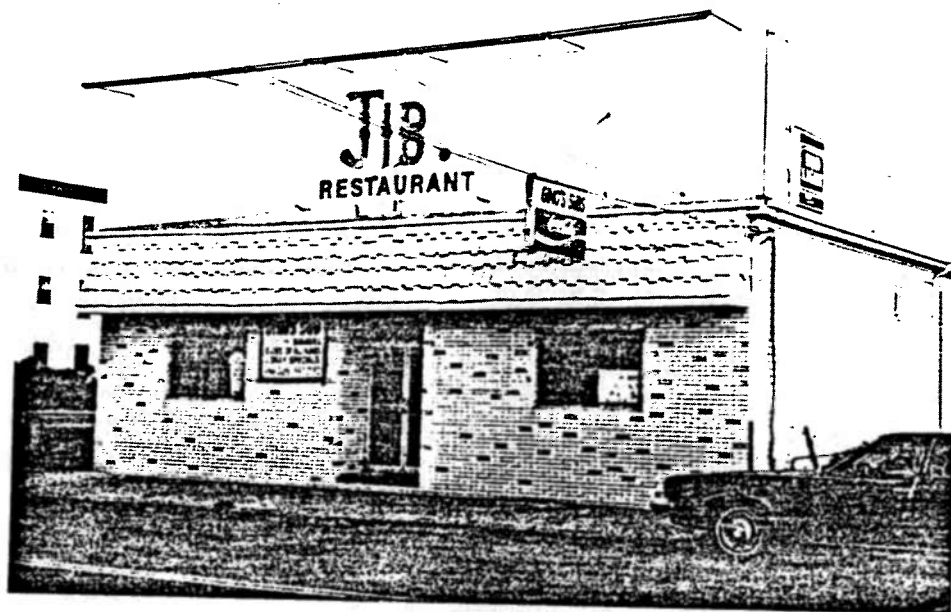

THE WHITE EAGLE

Here's a place Elwood and Jake Blues could play at only by mistake. What with the country music and the small stage that looked like it could have had a chicken wire front, this is probably the closest you'll get to a country bar in Lynn. There's no sign out front and there exists some confusion as to whether it is "The Bus Stop" in its current incarnation of "The White Eagle" - a local expert assures us it's the latter. Clientele was diverse with some apparently choosing to sleep at the bar. The management doesn't seem to mind. A Tom's vending machine provides the only sustenance at this bar, so this could be a very cheap date. If your boots are built for walking, might as well walk to the White Eagle. No spittons though, so park the chaw outside.

THE JIB

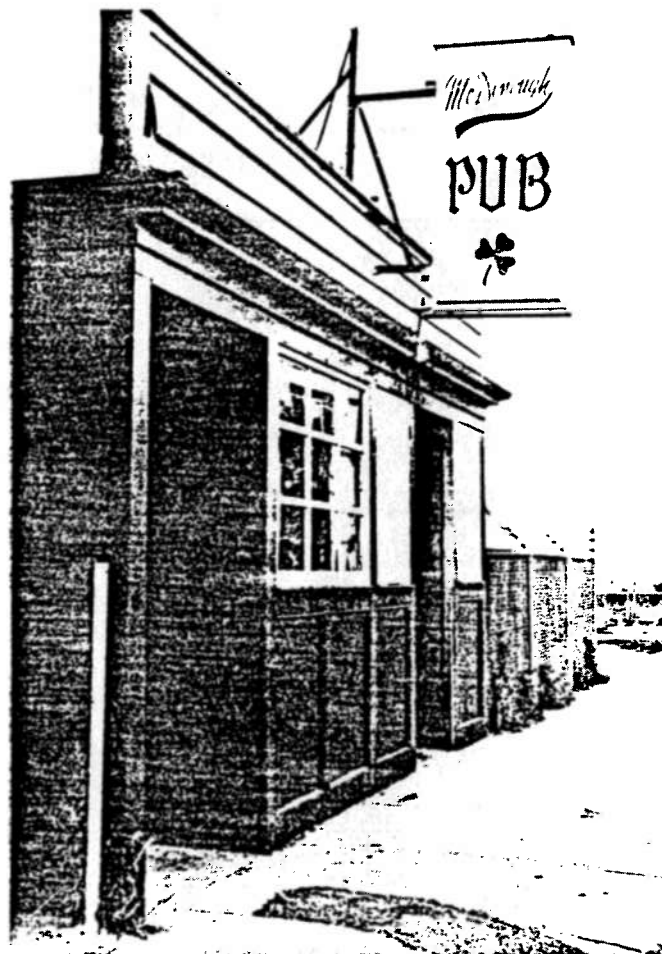

The bar is long, narrow, and dark with a limited bar at the front. It was a small crowd the night we were there - though they all seemed to be enjoying themselves. Our own senses were starting to dull and cloud at this point. This is another basic color T.V., video game, and miniature bowling establishment. There are no darts. We moved on.

MCDONOUGH'S PUB

An Irish bar without Draft Guinness - a cruel, cruel hoax. That being said right off - let's move on. The panelling has obviously been put up by someone with a whole lot of remodelled basements under his belt. The carpetted ceiling posts are a touch any drunk would appreciate. An awful lot of furniture to catch the errant foot however, so don't get careless. Looks like some food beyond the standard bar fare might be available here so you might ask for a menu. Darts could be played but you'd have to get permission to move some tables.

Looks like a big place to go after Beano.

ROADHOUSE

We don't want to imply that the Roadhouse was slow the night we visited, but we had to draw the bartender off his seat on the front steps to serve us our grog.

Obviously, a Harley bar. With a sign on the wall as you enter that reads:

PROPER DRESS REQUIRED
NO JACKETS
NO TIES
NO BROWN SHOES

It was evident that they enforced these rules by the slew of the "trophies" displayed on the far wall.

Our burly but polite (in his own way) bartender was congenial enough to even turn the dart board light on for us. (Nothing like the Golden Turd, I mean Golden Circle). I guess this bar is hungry for customers and will go to these great lengths to prove it.

We enjoyed our stay at the rugged Roadhouse - even considered a second beer - time flies though and we soon found ourselves in the parking lot looking back at it's entrances and the Roadhouse's explicit sign next to the front door "FOOD

TO EAT".

These guys are serious.

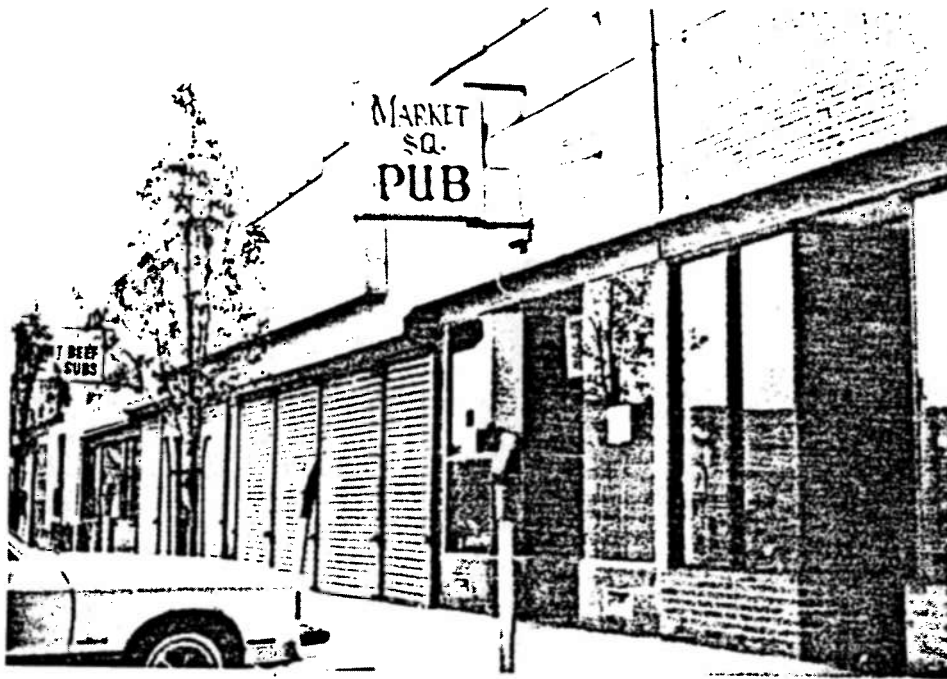

MARKET SQUARE PUB

A smokey old pub, with a standard bowling alley geometry and a greying mirror, the Market Square is a quiet and (seemingly) a place that hosts "regulars" exclusively.

The bartender was tolerant of the two obvious strangers and the uneasy feeling was shared by all else present.

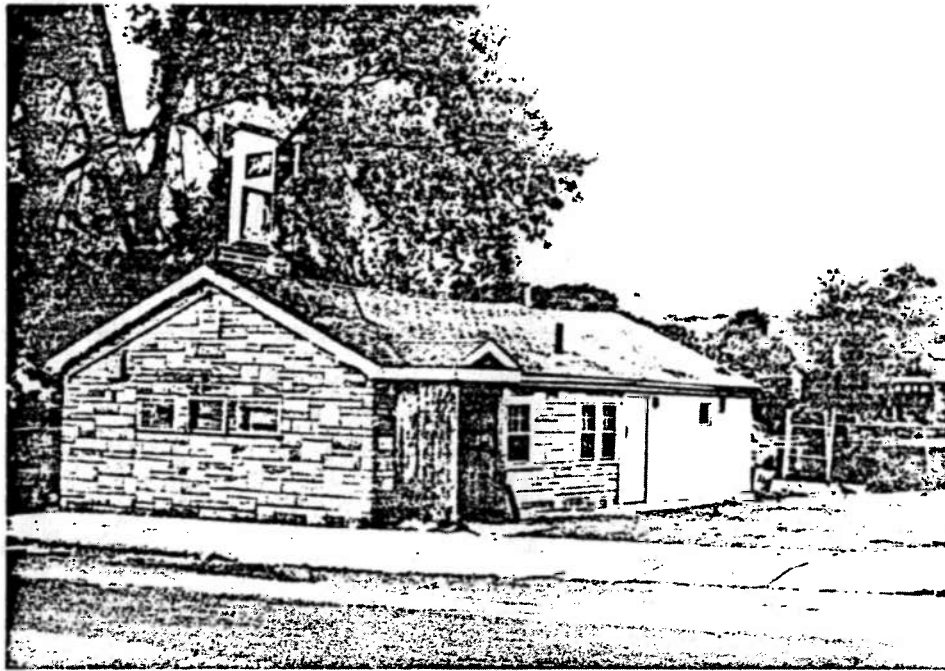

Even though the kick-boxing on the color T.V. was drawing in our interest, it was already time to leave when we stepped our first foot through the door.

A sigh was breathed as we moved on.

THE FOUR WINDS

Located on scenic Sluice Pond, this bar is similar in overall ambiance to Buchanan's. More of a shack than a building. The evening we were there, a cool breeze was wafting over the water and through the windows to cool the dart players during their exertions. Bathroom is comparable in size to Buchanan's also and with the sink (!!!) up around your chin, washing your hands is tricky but throwing up is cake. A good pool table, too.

UNION STATION

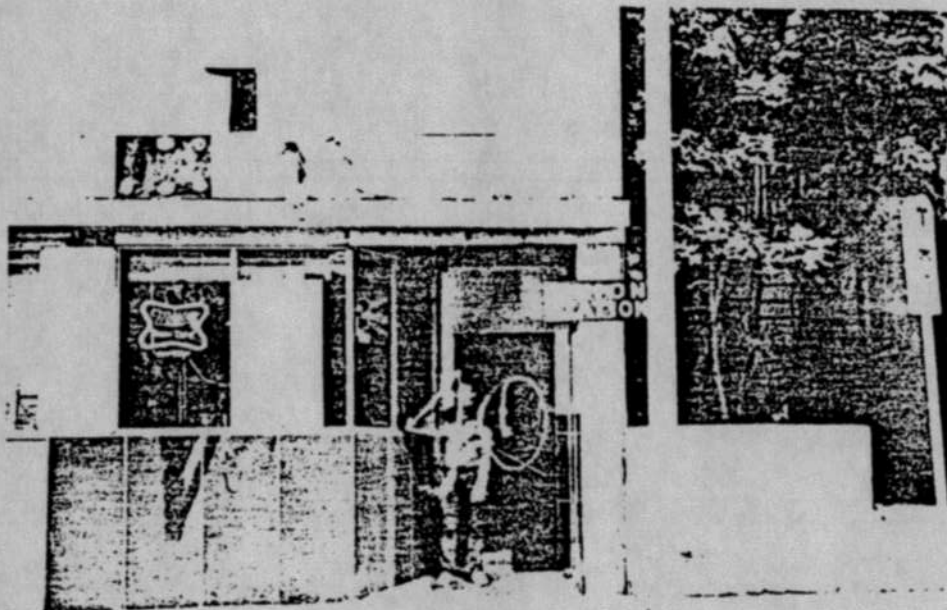

What can you say about #40? Good, bad, or stale beer - it's still the big four oh. Kinda special.

As we hummed the Rocky theme and shadow-boxed as we walked up to the door, a tingle shot up our spines when we crossed the threshold.

We were anxious. A dense smoke assaulted us. It was crowded and loud. Willie Nelson on the Jukebox singing about shaving his hair and combing his face. We seated ourselves at the bar and ordered the 40 gun salute. 1 bourbon, 1 scotch, 1 beer. As we had done before, many times before, we headed towards the dart boards to continue the contest of wills. There are seven boards here - laid out like horse stalls. Our games went quick and that melancholic but satisfied feeling overwhelmed us.

Rather than overstay our stop at the Station, we slowly walked out into the night. We had come full circle. Nostalgic of our first night, we saluted onto the railroad tracks; in the distance a whistle blew.

A JOB WELL DONE.

AFTERWORD/DISCLAIMERS

December 15, 1986

Narrowly defined, the goal of this tour was to do 40 bars in 40 nights. It is not a complete work, rather we liken it to a watershed work designed to encourage the reader to his or her own contributions to the literature. We deliberately skipped some bars as too fancy, or simply missed others. The Venice and the 50 Club come to mind. It is, at best, a moment frozen (well, most of 'em are frozen - the Shawmut's petrified). In time, years from now, some will surely have drained the last key and rolled on to that great empty keg in the sky or have been remodelled to suit the latest fashion. So, why'd we bother? Why'd we do it? Who cares? We each have our own reasons:

"Because it's beer." - Grant.

"I can't remember." - Jim.

One thing we both want to know is why anyone would read it.

Grateful acknowledgement to Fran who translated handwritten doggrel into typewritten text.